Developing Human Resources

In order for the human race to continue to thrive, we have the responsibility to protect the natural environment and to create a social environment full of vitality. To accomplish such tasks, the innovation and development of science and technology becomes essential. The individuals capable of meeting such demands of society not only possess the insight and executive ability derived from their field of study but also the ability to oversee other related academic fields. Moreover, respect towards the environment and adherences to such humility are indispensable.

The Graduate School of Science and Engineering has its educational aim based upon the Christian faith to nurture individuals according to the school motto “The Salt of the Earth and The Light of the World”. Through its instruction in the specialized area of studies, the Graduate School of Science and Engineering educates individuals to be professional researchers devoted to international leadership.

In the Master’s Program, students are exposed to a wide range of classes including those that will become the foundation of their area of specialization. As a result, students grow to possess the earnestness and fundamentals which become necessary for learning and research.

Educational Goals

In the Master’s Program, students are provided a well-balanced curriculum of classes to broaden their perspective and English classes which focus on practicality as well as high-quality classes in their area of specialty. As a result, students not only acquire the knowledge and ability to apply such knowledge but also logical decision-making skills and language tools necessary for international conferences. Moreover, through the guidance of their research thesis, students discover the process of identifying and resolving problems.

Curriculum Features

The future of scientific research and its development lies in the hands of those who not only possess the knowledge and expertise in the various fields as well as their area of specialty but also the ability to apply their knowledge with a broad perspective. In order to nurture such talents, the Graduate School of Science and Engineering removed barriers which have existed among the eight areas of specialization. By offering one major and eight areas (8 courses) of specialization, students can:

1. Pursue an area of interest regardless of the kind of undergraduate degree.
2. Register for classes both in and out of their area of specialization in addition to the required courses.
3. Conduct cutting-edge research which is made possible because of the cooperation and cohesiveness in the school among the various areas of specialization.
4. Carry out interdisciplinary research as well as explore completely new areas.

[3] Awarded Degree

Graduate Students may pursue studies leading to any of the following degrees:

- Master of Science
- Master of Engineering

[4] Course Details

The Graduate School of Science and Engineering consists of one department, the Department of Science and Engineering, which includes the following eight Courses.

(1) Fundamental Science Course:

Focusing in particular on mathematical science, materials science, solid-state physics, astrophysics, and atomic, molecular, and plasma physics, the course is planned to serve students with a broad spectrum of interests and objectives in the natural science. Also, the course is extending to new fields such as complex systems, strongly correlated quantum systems, physics of friction, earthquake, etc. The specialty studies cultivate the students' ability to build models for a range of issues and solve problems.

(2) Chemistry Course:

The course consists of three fields: physical chemistry, organic chemistry and inorganic analytical chemistry. Focusing on a wide range of molecular systems that include individual molecules and tissues showing organic functions and many other functions, the course bases its studies on the primary viewpoint of chemistry and broadens and deepens the students' knowledge of chemistry.

(3) Materials Science Course:

Focusing on the creation of substances with new functions, the course provides comprehensive studies concerning material design, device manufacture and other applications. Based on material physics, solid-state chemistry, materials science, thin-film engineering, electrical engineering and other fields, the course trains future leaders of most advanced materials science who are well informed on a broad range of issues.

(4) Biological Science Course:

The rapid progress in biological science is not only expanding new frontiers of science and technology, but also beginning to influence the human society. The aim of the Biological Science Course is to provide students with fundamental knowledge of molecular biology as a common basis to work in this wide field and to develop abilities to plan and carry out research on their own by joining the ongoing research on the structure, function and regulation of the biological molecules. Taking advantage of being a member of The Graduate School of Science and Engineering, we also encourage students to take part in the technical advancements in this field.

(5) Electrical Engineering and Electronics Course:

A broad range of laboratories, including circuit systems, communication theory, and materials accept graduate students. With the aim of establishing themselves as engineers and researchers, the students are focused on fields that support the foundation of modern societies and include energies, measurement/control, information/communications, electronic devices, materials and any related fields. Emphasis is placed on directed research and, in the process; we endeavor to provide students with the ability to think independently make discoveries and solve problems. Students advancing to the course need clear study goals to establish themselves as engineers and researchers.

(6) Mechanical Engineering Course:

This course trains engineers and researchers who will contribute to the sustainable development of humanity by creating instruments and systems with superior performance. In other words, students base their studies on a broad range of viewpoints, such as energy, environment, safety and ethics, while deepening their understanding of shapes, mechanisms, and the dynamic actions of materials. Combining a range of factors, such as machines and intelligence, the course enables students to acquire advanced skills in information processing, measurement and analysis. The research and guidance foster comprehensive skills in the students, enabling them to identify and solve problems.

(7) Intelligence and Information Course:

Education and research in the Intelligence and Information Course covers a wide range of computer and information related topics including human-computer interaction, natural language understanding, big data, computer vision, robotics, wearable devices, and network and web technology. The goal is to learn to create and master new technologies as well as to understand their role in human society.

(8) Management Technology Course:

The course teaches advanced management technologies applied in production systems, supply chain, business management, environmental management, quality management, and other related areas. By conceptualizing those technologies, the course emphasizes advanced data analysis, system modeling, and optimization techniques. The course enables students to acquire deep understanding the essence of advanced Japanese management systems, such as production systems, total quality management.
